

Oil Refinery Operations

Our Program

The Oil Refinery Operations Online Training Program will prepare you for an entry-level career as an oil refinery operator. In the United States, there are thousands of oil refineries and each of these facilities are operated by oil refinery operators. These positions are high paying entry-level careers with a stable work environment, and the demand for entry-level employees is ongoing in the industry with a large portion of the workforce retiring in the coming years.

In this program, trainees will learn and understand the full range of responsibilities to ensure units and process systems function properly. Personnel safety is the primary objective along with ensuring production processes are operating safely. Operators are also responsible to detect potential and actual problems and take corrective action to prevent the interruption of system operations.
