ACCESSIBLE AND CONVENIENT COURSES TO FOSTER STUDENT SUCCESS

STUDYING AT HER OWN PACE TO SERVE OTHERS IN RECOVERY

AIMEE L. wanted to serve those in recovery by becoming a Certified Alcohol and Drug Counselor (CADC). Completing this type of certification would increase her job prospects, but she needed to find a way to achieve her career goals while keeping herself financially afloat during the COVID-19 pandemic.

Aimee discovered ed2go's online Professional Recovery Coach course through Washington County Community College. She selected the course because of its online accessibility and available funding. Although Aimee had initial reservations about the online-only format due to the personal nature of the content, she became reassured once she experienced the interactive course content.

“The system was easy to navigate, it was compatible with my devices, and support was readily available.”

After completing her program, Aimee passed her course exam. From there, she completed a Certified Alcohol Drug Counselor (CADC) course, and is currently working as a substance use disorder counselor in a residential treatment center.
